

Andrew Klayman
Net Art

We are in a time period where net art is blossoming into one of the main visual art styles people view in their every day. The amount of media that is able to be produced, reproduced, conceptualized and designed through almost any form of electronic platform is changing how artists work. I think it also hard to understand every aspect of Net art in the same way it is bound to digital art. I also believe that net art has much more to offer as our manipulation of the internet and its tools are only in its infancy. I also hope that net art becomes as wide spread as possible allowing the art world to live in parallel with it.