

NET.ART

Net.art started was a movement that started in 1994 as a parody to the Avant Garde Movement. Net.art uses the internet as its' primary medium; artists use parts and code from the internet and websites to create unique pieces of art designed specifically for viewing on the web. Often times artists will hack, clone and copy material from the web to create their pieces which often brings up the question, does anyone actually own the internet? Currently, net.art has no variations and is always changing.
