

Net art is something that has pretty much transcended normal art standards. It is something that was born on the computer and is transferred to many viewing audiences via the internet. It allows the work of art to be transferred and viewed on so many more levels than traditional works of art. Which allows it to gain its fame and appreciation a lot faster. But because of how fast everything can be viewed it can also be forgotten just as fast, becoming lost in the ever expanding internet world.